In 1992 pulmonary tuberculosis was found in 927 out of 10000 cases (9.27%), of which 13.5% were smear positive. With the approval of the Department of Social Affairs and Health in 1993, a programme was set up to support diagnostic and control activities; It consists of case finding, smear microscopy, evaluation of smear-positive cases and follow-up of those with smear-negative disease. Programme accomplishments are: lung cancer screening and control, incidence of smear-positive tuberculosis: 8.52% of cases; mortality: 2.26% of cases. The National Tuberculosis Programme, was approved in 1993 and will continue to provide support to the programme and to complete its objectives. Endogenous production of progesterone in bovine granulosa cells during treatment with FSH. Granulosa cells of preovulatory follicles were isolated from heifers treated with FSH. The estradiol (E2) content was measured in the incubation medium. A significant increase in E2 release with a higher level in response to higher doses of FSH was obtained. Progesterone (P) production was also measured in the incubation medium. The interstitial cells isolated from the follicle produced a significant amount of P, which increased with a higher dose of FSH. The addition of E2 or medroxyprogesterone acetate (MPA) to the culture medium increased P production. The data suggest that FSH stimulates the activity of the newly synthesized progestin (P) by granulosa cells and that this progestin is present in the ovarian follicle. Q: Why does the method change the rows in a JTable? I've got a problem with my JTable. When I try to get the values the method returns an empty TableModel. But the values I input are stored in the columns. I'm not sure why the getChanges() method changes all the rows to the values I input. How can I fix this problem? public class ReadInTable extends JFrame { public int NumberOfColumns = 5; public int NumberOfRows = 7; public Object[][] Values = new Object[5][5]; public ReadInTable(3e33713323
