(John Froschauer, The Seattle Times) Defensive end Cliff Avril Some defensive linemen have a lot of money. Hall of Famer Warren Sapp, for example, was a former standout at Mississippi State and a two-time Pro Bowler. Defensive lineman Frank Clark of the Seahawks fits that bill too. Some of Clark's best friends, though, are the football players in the Seattle area. There's Kevin Pierre-Louis, a defensive end from Washington high school; Michael Bennett, a defensive lineman from the University of Illinois and D.C. standout player at Roosevelt; and Sheldon Richardson, an offensive lineman from Lake Washington. "I had a lot of people around me that taught me football.... I didn't really have none of those people growing up. So, I feel the lack of those people," Richardson said Thursday. Wide receiver Tyler Lockett Tyler Lockett has one of the hardest knocks in football. He played his college ball at Kansas State, but where many of the Wildcats' great receivers came through is Houston's Cougar-Kingdom. Lockett said he is banking on the promise of Bruce Irvin, a formidable defender at West Virginia, to help him do the same in Seattle. "Bruce is definitely something to watch for," Lockett said. "I'm thinking about what he does. He's a tough guy. He's a guy that's used to being under the spotlight. I think that helps me play. He's going to help me grow, help me mature.... "That's just what I look for. I want somebody to lead me. I want somebody to inspire me. I want somebody to grow with me, somebody that's a mentor. Like a Bruce Irvin or a Patrick Willis

What is a blind person? A blind person (also called a low vision user or visual impaired person) is a person who has a visual impairment that significantly limits their ability to see. The visual impairment is permanent and is not expected to improve. What are blinds? Blinds are pieces of textured fabric used by people with visual impairments to help them see. The fabric (often textile) is stretched over a wooden framework, by using hooked devices on the edge of the fabric. When pulled or stretched by the person's head, it enables them to read the printed text. What is Braille? Braille is a tactile system of writing developed for the blind in the 19th century. Although it is not a form of text, Braille reading devices convert the Braille into a format that can be read by the eye. Braille characters (or cells) are raised embossed characters, displayed as dots, on tactile, braille cells. Braille is sometimes used to teach children to read. Braille characters are made in several formats (for example, American Standard Code for Information Interchange (ASCII) and Metric Braille) and come in different layouts. The most common type of Braille for people with vision loss is the Standard Tactile Braille (STB) format. What is "printing for the blind"? Printing for the Blind (PFB) is the process of creating text with raised lines to make written text readable by the blind. The raised lines enable the blind to read the text as braille. The PFB process is the same as regular printing, except for the text to be printed is raised above the paper. What is the Publish tab in the Publish Center? The Publish tab in the Publish Center allows you to add a publish layout to the publish site. Before the publish layout can be added to a publish site, you must select a publish site. You can save the work you have done on the publish layout by exporting it
